

Expense & Reimbursement Policy

1. General Principles

Business expenses must be reasonable, properly documented, and directly related to company work. Employees should use the lowest reasonable cost option available and avoid expenses that could appear excessive or personal in nature.

2. Approval Thresholds

Expenses under $100 may be self-approved at the time of submission. Expenses between $100 and $1,000 require approval from your direct manager. Expenses over $1,000 require approval from both your manager and a department finance lead before the purchase is made, not after.

3. Travel Expenses

Airfare should be booked in economy class for flights under six hours; premium economy may be booked for longer flights with manager approval. Hotel bookings should not exceed $250 per night in standard cost-of-living cities, or $400 per night in designated high-cost cities such as New York, London, or Tokyo.

4. Meals and Entertainment

Meals while traveling for business are reimbursable up to $75 per day. Client entertainment expenses require the names of all attendees and a brief business purpose to be reimbursed. Alcohol is reimbursable only in client entertainment contexts, not for solo meals.

5. Submission Deadline

All expense reports must be submitted within 30 days of the expense being incurred. Reports submitted after 30 days will be rejected automatically by the finance system and require a manual exception request to process.

6. Equipment Purchases

Equipment purchases of any kind, including monitors, keyboards, or software licenses, must go through the IT procurement system rather than the general expense system, except for the home office stipend described in the Remote Work Policy.
