

Academic Standing Policy

GPA THRESHOLDS

Good academic standing requires a cumulative GPA of at least 2.0. Students whose cumulative GPA falls between 1.5 and 1.99 are placed on academic probation. Students whose cumulative GPA falls below 1.5, or who fail to improve while on probation, are subject to academic suspension.

ACADEMIC PROBATION

A student placed on academic probation must meet with an academic advisor before registering for the following semester and is limited to a maximum course load of 13 credit hours while on probation. Probation status is reviewed at the end of each semester based on updated cumulative GPA.

ACADEMIC SUSPENSION

A first academic suspension lasts one full semester, after which a student may petition to return. A second suspension results in a minimum one-year separation from the university. Suspended students are not eligible for financial aid disbursement during their suspension period.

APPEALS PROCESS

Students may appeal an academic suspension by submitting a written petition to the Academic Standing Committee, which meets monthly. A successful appeal typically requires a documented explanation of extenuating circumstances and a concrete plan for academic improvement going forward.

GRADE REPLACEMENT

Students on academic probation may retake up to two previously failed courses under the Grade Replacement policy, in which only the higher of the two grades counts toward cumulative GPA, although both attempts remain on the transcript.